

DARNALL'S DETERMINATION.

His Application for Liquor License Approved by the Excessive Board.

C. L. Darnall is determined not to give up. His new barroom on Shenandoah avenue has been standing closed since last June. He was granted license a by the excessive board at that time, but the abutting property holders appealed the matter to Judge Robertson, who refused to grant the license. A great deal of feeling has been exercised in the matter, but Darnall has been determined for some time to obtain what he considered his rights.

The excessive board met yesterday evening at the office of T. W. Miller, a member of the board, to consider the application which was received. There were present: R. A. Buckner, chairman; T. W. Miller, and R. J. Eckloff. Mr. Darnall was represented by Samuel McH. Gish, and the citizens who object to the saloon by Judge A. E. King. The first witness examined was Acting Chief of Police Brown. The object of his testimony was to show whether or not there was sufficient police protection in the Third ward to warrant the licensing of another saloon over them.

Mr. Brown testified that only two officers were on duty in that ward at night, and as the saloons were much scattered, it would be difficult to give sufficient police protection.

Mr. Darnall said there was never an arrest made at his saloon, and when properly conducted there was no need of police protection.

Mr. Eckloff voted "aye," and gave as his reason if the Second ward with all its saloons could be protected by eight men he was sure the Third ward could be looked after with two.

Mr. Miller, who previously voted for granting the license, voted "no," saying that Judge Robertson had decided against the saloon in that locality and he considered it a law now in force.

Mr. Buckner voted "aye," saying he had no reason to change his opinion. It didn't make any difference how Judge Robertson construed the law.

So the application was granted again. The matter now goes before Judge Robertson on appeal of the abutting property owners, and many witnesses will be summoned for and against.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE.

A Stranger Drops a Demented Old Woman in Roanoke and Disappears.

An old white lady was taken off the Norfolk and Western train yesterday by a man about 50 years of age. They were roughly clad and seemed to belong to the poorer class. From the gripsacks which the man carried they would be taken for companions who were traveling. The old lady was left in charge of "Aunt Mary," the ladies' attendant at the depot, while the man went out to look for his companion's friends. He said she had acquaintances in Roanoke, and he had brought her here to live with them.

The man went away, and the old woman was left alone. Aunt Mary saw that her mind was impaired and at times had hard work to keep her from wandering out on the railroad track.

After staying away for some time the man returned, and said he had found her friends and gave Aunt Mary twenty-five cents to send her out in a "bus." The man then picked up her gripsack and that was the last that has been seen of him.

Aunt Mary sent the woman out by a hack driver, but he soon returned with his charge saying that no such people could be found. The man gave the name of the family as Nunley.

Officer Ware tried to find out the woman's name, but she had no memory for anything. He then took her to police headquarters, where the commissioner of the poor was called in and found that her name was Mrs. Rhoda Hodges. She could not tell what county she came from, but said her post-office address was Tennell's Store, or something that sounded like that. She was sent to the almshouse until an investigation of the matter could be made.

Who the man was that brought the helpless old woman here is a mystery. He never made himself known, and left the city on the next train. Mrs. Hodges is certainly a fit subject for the asylum, and if nothing can be heard of her people a board of lunacy will be asked to examine the case.

For Stealing a Calf.

Arthur Sheppard and Tom Finney, two colored boys, were tried before Justice Howerton yesterday on the charge of stealing a calf from James W. Beard, Second avenue n. w. The evidence adduced showed that the boys stole the calf and sold it to a butcher for $3. Beard traced the matter up and found the calf. Finney was sent to jail for thirty-three days and Sheppard for eighteen days.

Contracts have been about completed between some English parties and the Lock Laird Estate and Mineral Company for the establishment of a manganese grinding mill at Saverlake. The development of the manganese deposits have lately shown a probability of the existence of even larger amounts of this mineral, which is desired than has been supposed to be the case. The Lock Laird Company is desirous of obtaining all the profit to be made from this mineral, which sells for a very much higher price when ground than when in the condition of lump oxide, as sold to steel works. The products of these works, when completed, will probably be shipped to Liverpool via Norfolk or Newport News.
